Preparing for a Visit to the Poetry Center—Teacher Contract

Lead teachers are responsible for reading and signing at the bottom of the following information. Additionally, we ask that lead teachers communicate the following information to all other participating teachers, chaperones, and students prior to arriving at the Poetry Center.

Pre-trip checklist

- Have students bring a writing notebook and a pencil.
- Have students put on nametags before arrival to the Center. Name tags should have clear writing and be worn in a location that tour guides can read. Name tags that use small writing or are hiding on pants, backpacks, purses do not help us establish rapport and respect with your students.
- Group your students in pairs and have some system for helping them remember who their partner is.
- Leave large bags, packages, backpacks, umbrellas or similar items in your classroom or on the bus or van.
- Bring a camera to document your students' experiences.
- If you plan to arrive by bus, please notify Wren Goblirsch at pceducation@arizona.edu as soon as you book your trip--they will send you info about reserving parking.
- Classroom teachers and chaperones are responsible for the behavior of their groups. We ask that visitors refrain from touching the artwork, use indoor voices, and walk.
- Should you need to cancel your trip, we request 24 hour notice.
- All teachers and chaperones are invited and encouraged to explore, read, and write alongside their students.

What to expect the day of your field trip

A field trip to the Poetry Center lasts an hour and a half and includes a 20-30 minute tour of the Poetry Center, with a self-guided component, and a writing workshop. Poetry Center field trips are led by Poetry Center staff.

Before getting started, we will direct your group to the public restrooms and drinking fountains, help you stow sack lunches (if applicable), and get name tags for all members of the group (if necessary). You can save time by having your group already wearing name tags and bringing only the materials needed for the trip, i.e. a writing notebook.

During the tour portion of the field trip, students will be given time to explore the first floor of the library in small groups using a self-guided activity. Students are welcome to look at the art work on the walls and in display cases during this time. Students are also welcome to look at, touch, and browse the books.

I have read “Preparing for a Visit to the Poetry Center—Teacher Contract” and understand how the Poetry Center is asking me to prepare students, chaperones, and co-teachers for the trip to the Poetry Center.
